DeVry's Medical Billing & Coding - Health Information Coding certificate program can help prepare you for more advanced entry-level positions in field of health information coding.

Medical billing and coding professionals play an important role in healthcare today. As the healthcare system strives to provide more efficient and effective care, the use of electronic medical records (EMRs) is an integral part of that effort. The industry needs skilled, qualified medical insurance billers and coders (medical records and health information technicians) to accurately record, register, submit and track each patient's account. DeVry’s Medical Billing & Coding - Health Information Coding program can prepare you for more advanced entry-level positions in the field of health information coding.

This program is part of TechPath – an experiential, tech-centric plan of study that better prepares you for a tech-infused world.

About this Program

DeVry University partners with The American Health Information Management Association (AHIMA). AHIMA is the premier association of health information management (HIM) professionals worldwide and has played a leadership role in the effective management of health data and medical records.

Hands-on, Virtual Learning Platform

In our MBC programs, you’ll work in AHIMA’s VLab – an internet-based, virtual lab environment that gives you first-hand experience with real-world medical records. You’ll work with actual applications and build skills that can better position you to hit the ground running. It’s part of the TechPath approach we believe in, to better prepare you for what comes next.
